

The Biggest Changes in My Life So Far

My biggest change emerged before the beginning of the semester at the university. I was living in a small village in South Bohemia with a population of seventy people, so I had to move to a vast city from my perspective. The very first night I couldn't fall asleep at all, I was used to a calm environment and trees around me, not to a loud car noise.

Secondly, I was not used to studying at all, high school was quite easy for me, so I did not have to do a lot to pass with wonderful grades. I expected university to be difficult, but I was shocked. The number of tasks exceeded my expectations.

Lastly, when I was younger, I didn't see all the chores that have to be done. When I started university, I had to learn how to take care of myself. You have to put yourself in the shoes of a student who suddenly must cook, do laundry and clean the house. Nowadays, it is not an issue anymore, although there is still room for improvement.

My second major change comes from high school. I am not the most social person you can imagine. I am an extrovert when there are friends around me, but when I have to be social with strangers, it is one of the most difficult things I can imagine. During the first months, I sat at my desk and did not talk to my new classmates. Moreover, I didn't even know their names. One day there was a breakthrough, and I started talking to people and eventually, they became my great friends.

These are the two biggest changes in my life, and they were difficult to overcome, but I think they made me a better person and now I am ready for new challenges.
